Cause Of Accidents Being Hushed - Charge

Self-Critical Faculty Goes
First, As Brain Affected

SCORES BREWERS' AIDS

Declaring that a half-second's hesitation in a highway traffic emergency means 20 feet, Rev. H. Dobson, speaking in the interests of the Ontario Temperance Federation, condemned "moderate drinking" at Trinity United church on Sunday morning.

"In the use of alcohol the first thing that goes is the self-critical faculty and the power of self-control," declared Mr. Dobson.

The cause of fatal automobile accidents, due to drinking, is being hushed up, Mr. Dobson charged.

"Within the last month a movement has been inaugurated with-

The reference was to advertising now appearing in many newspapers throughout the province.

LIKES TO SEE TRAINS GO BY PATIENT TELLS

Came To Newmarket As A Bride 50 Years Ago,
Mrs. Racine Says

BEEN ILL SIX YEARS

By Bea Westcott

Smiling cheerfully and talking happily of her years as a patient in York County Hospital, Mrs. Henry Racine told The Era from her bed in the hospital this week that she first came to make her home in Newmarket as a bride 50 years ago.

A resident of hospitals for the last six years, Mrs. Racine is badly twisted with arthritis. The constant pain and lack of sleep have not embittered her outlook on life.

"Miss Dulmage and all the nurses are wonderful to me," she said. "I don't know how I will get along if Miss Dulmage goes. She manages everything so smoothly and well and is so kind to everyone. I always have this bed in the corner overlooking the town where I can see all that happens. I like to see and hear the trains at night, as they are company when everyone else is asleep."

"I can still read and I get a lot of letters, but I can't write any more and it is difficult to find people who have time enough to write letters for me. I am so glad I am able to feed myself."

Mrs. Racine was born six miles from Queensville and spent much of her early life at Jackson's Point. At the age of 18 she married Albert Thompson at Sutton and came to Newmarket as a bride.

"Eighteen is really too young to be married," Mrs. Racine said. "Twenty or 21 is certainly early enough. If I had a daughter, I would not want her to get married at 18."

They had three sons, two of whom are in Toronto, and the third is in Chicago. Her husband was killed 25 years ago by a train.

Thirteen years ago on Aug. 4 next she married Henry Racine, who died March 19, 1930.

"I have taken The Era for almost 50 years," Mrs. Racine said. "I look for it as much as I look for my supper, and nothing has interfered with my appetite. The paper has improved greatly and I generally read parts of it to the other patients in the ward when they want me to."

South Africans To Be Entertained Royally

Next Thursday will be a red-letter day in the history of the Newmarket Lawn Bowling club. A party of about 50 bowlers and their wives will be here from South Africa and will be royally entertained.

Members of the local club will motor to Toronto to bring the visitors here for lunch and a civic reception at the King George hotel. Mayor Dr. S. J. Boyd and other members of the council will extend the civic welcome.

The party will proceed to the bowling grounds and play a 21-end game. Bowlers will be here from all parts of the district to play the South Africans. Afternoon tea will then be served, and the party will be taken to Lake Simcoe for a drive.

Bands Lead Procession In Kinghorn School's Reunion

Walter Rolling, Teacher
For Forty Years
Honored

Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, minister of education, and Joseph McCulley, headmaster of Pickering College, will be among the speakers at the reunion of former pupils and friends of Kinghorn school (S.S. 23, King) on Saturday.

The occasion will be marked as "Walter Rolling day." Mr. Rolling has retired after 40 years' teaching in Kinghorn school. Newmarket will compete in the softball tournament. Newmarket Citizens' Band and R.S.A. Bugle Band will head a grand procession from Burn's Bush at 2 p.m., D.S.T.

Aubrey Davis, Newmarket, is president of the reunion committee. The three Newmarket Davis brothers, Aubrey, Andrew and E. J., and the two Kingston brothers, Elmer and Harold, attended Kinghorn school. John Groves and James Germain are other Newmarketers who attended Kinghorn.

IRVING LINDENBAUM WED IN TORONTO

A pretty wedding took place on Sunday when Irving William Lindenbaum, of Hanover, formerly of Newmarket, was married to Miss Anne Sax, daughter of Mr. A. Sax, Toronto, and the late Mrs. Sax.

The ceremony, performed by Rev. A. Bornstein, took place in Ostroff synagogue. The best man was Wm. L. Lindenbaum of Newmarket. The matron of honor was Mrs. I. Gringorten. The groom was supported by I. Lindenbaum of Newmarket.

The happy couple took a motor trip through New York state, visiting relatives in New York city.

A happy group of delegates and friends came back from the Lions "Showboat" convention, a convention held on a lake boat, yesterday and today. District Governor H. E. Lambert presided over the convention of Lions clubs of Ontario and Quebec.

The party went Sunday by motor to Port Colborne, and enjoyed a sight-seeing tour through the Niagara peninsula as guests of the peninsula clubs. They then took the convention boat at Port Colborne, stopping Monday night at Cleveland as guests of the Ohio clubs, and Tuesday night at Detroit as guests of the Michigan clubs, returning to Port Colborne yesterday.

Members of the party were H. E. Lambert, Mrs. Lambert, Miss Gwen Lambert, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Courtney, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bosworth, Mr. and Mrs. J. Geer, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Cousins, A. C. ### HAY PROSPECT THOUGHT GOOD

What is the meaning of those light spots in some of the hay fields this spring. The Era asked W. M. Cockburn, agricultural representative, this week.

There was not much winter killing," Mr. Cockburn said. "It was the dry weather last summer. There will be a fairly satisfactory crop of hay, on present indications. Alfalfa is showing a very good growth."

"There has been quite a bit of late seeding of grain this year. How satisfactory it will prove, will depend on the weather from now on."

"Due to a shortage of seed, farmers could not show their usual discrimination in what they planted. Some farmers, forced to seed late by the slow drying of the land, had to plant late-maturing grain that they had planned to sow earlier."

"Some corn has been sown only now. Most farmers plan to have their corn in around May 24." Asked about potatoes, Mr. Cockburn said that the usual experience would suggest that there would be over-planting as a result of better prices last year.

Canadian Olympic Star Tells How It's Done

Dr. Phil Edwards Says Training Essential To Success

SPEAKS AT PICKERING

At the tenth closing athletic dinner last Friday evening Pickering College students had the privilege of hearing the famous colored track and field star, Dr. Phil Edwards. Other speakers were Norm Perry of the Sarnia football team, and Ted Reeve, sports writer and coach of the Queen's football team. Warren Stevens of the University of Toronto was present along with Wilfred Skitch.

Canadians Have Native Ability

"No particular build is necessary for success in track and field events," Dr. Edwards said. "There are men of all types at the top in every event. For a young fellow starting out it is important that he try several events until he finds the ones that are best suited to him."

From his experience and observations made at the three Olympics in which he competed for Canada, Dr. Edwards felt that Canadians could have just as much success as athletes of any country in the world if they would prepare themselves as carefully.

Athletes Encouraged in States

The difference between the coaching of track and field athletes in the States and Canada is that the Americans are encouraged to participate and to work hard for the events they like, Dr. Edwards said. According to the speaker, many of the Canadian coaches tell their boys that they don't stand a chance against other athletes from other countries unless they can break records here first. This gives the boys the feeling that there is little use working for the Olympic goal.

Training Rules

Regular, consistent work is the first requisite for success, Dr. Edwards said. The competitor should work while he is out on the track but never should extend himself until he is in a meet. The best effort should be saved until you are facing your opponent. The speaker discussed the use of alcohol, smoking and diet. He felt that the former two should have no place in an athlete's training. Regular home meals, varied, are best.

York Sheriff Speaks At Decoration Day Service

Parade To Cemetery Marks
Annual Service Of Remembrance

The annual decoration day service is being held at Newmarket cemetery on Sunday. The parade will fall in at the market square, near the town hall, at 2:30 p.m. Among those parading will be the firemen, the veterans, the R.S.A. Bugle Band, and the Newmarket Citizens' Band.

Sheriff W. H. S. Cane is the guest speaker. Rev. A. J. Patstone is in charge of the service and a choir will take part to assist with the singing. Amplifiers will be used so that all will be able to hear.

"HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT" AT LOCAL SHOW

Charles Boyer and Jean Arthur, a fascinating new pair of screen lovers, will slip into the Palace Theatre Friday and Saturday evenings this week in a film romance as fresh and smart and charming as the Paris in which it blooms.

The occasion will be "History Is Made At Night," and this story from the twin typewriters of that inimitable team of Gen Towne and Graham Baker fairly sparkles with bright, gay, flippant dialogue that we wager you'll be quelling for months.

The handsome Boyer has never been seen to better advantage than as Paul Dumond, Paris man-about-town and glorified head waiter, and lovely Jean Arthur is also at her charming best as Irene Vail, the New York mannequin who yearns to break the bonds of her unhappy marriage to the jealous, domineering shipping magnate, played by Colin Clive.

Political Leaders Plan To Attend Band Garden Party

Band Finds Public Co-operative In Plans For June 24 Event

With the ladies' auxiliaries of the different churches looking after the supper and the tickets in great demand so early, the Citizens' Band feel that only bad weather will prevent them from staging a very successful garden party next Thursday.

Earl Rowe, W. P. Mulock, Morgan Baker, Clifford Case, Amelius Jarvis, Dr. C. R. Boulding and other prominent public men expect to be here to renew old acquaintances.

Besides the prizes for the parade, three prizes of $5 worth of merchandise from any merchant in town will be drawn for, at the conclusion of the program. The winners must be on the grounds.

The boys report that never in the history of the band have the citizens responded so generously and co-operated so freely. It looks like a real "boost the band" night.

VISITED CHILDHOOD SCENES 23 YEARS AGO

He is survived by his wife and eight children; three sisters, Mrs. Alice Thompson, Toronto; Mrs. W. A. Miner, North Bay, and Mrs. W. Clarkson, Newmarket; and four brothers, Arthur in Toronto, Fred at Stouffville, Albert at Newmarket, and Wellington at Musselman's Lake. Two other brothers have died.

Women's Institute Asks Rural Dumping Grounds

Mrs. Arthur Boyd Is Re-elected President At District Meeting

The 30th district annual meeting of North York District Women's Institute, held in Trinity hall, Aurora, on Thursday, was a decided success.

The president, Mrs. Arthur Boyd of Newmarket, presided at the morning and afternoon sessions. The meeting opened with singing the Institute Ode, after which the president gave an address.

Reports were then received from the branches: Aurora, Belhaven, Elmhurst Beach, Gormley, Kettleby, Laskay, Mount Albert, Newmarket, Nobleton, Pine Orchard, Pefferlaw, Queensville, Schomberg, Sharon, Snowball, Temperanceville and Vandorf, showing a marked progress during the year. Mrs. H. Horner of Belhaven won the honor for the best report.

Mrs. W. R. Steeper of Mount Albert gave the report from the Federated Board, also showed a map giving the location of each branch.

Dinner was served by the Aurora branch and was greatly enjoyed.

The singing of "The Maple Leaf Forever" opened the afternoon session, and was followed by an address of welcome by

TORONTO ARMY LEADER TELLS OF SOCIAL WORK

"Changing conditions make necessary expansion in social work," Major Squarbriggs, Toronto woman Salvationist, told a women's group in the Friends meeting-house on Thursday afternoon in describing the social work of the Salvation Army.

Rev. Burton Hill, the pastor of the church, extended a warm welcome to all. Mrs. M. B. Seldon presided.

"The Salvation Army has 33 centres of social work in Canada," Mrs. Squarbriggs stated.

The chief of police in Kingston asked the Army headquarters for co-operation and Mrs. Squarbriggs was sent as a full-time police court matron. During her five-year term much good was accomplished. Many women and girls who were held on minor charges were turned over to the Army and thus did not have to spend the time in jail.

Two years ago Mrs. Squarbriggs became matron of the women's receiving home, 916 Yonge St., Toronto. This home admits aged people, infants and homeless girls in need, at all times. In conclusion Mrs. Squarbriggs said: "The only thing that pays in life is to live to serve."

A spiritual meeting was held in the Salvation Army hall Thursday evening when Major Squarbriggs spoke again. Officers and visitors from Toronto and Aurora, as well as from Newmarket, attended.

SELLING BEER WITH LEFT HAND

The liquor control board of the neighboring province of Quebec has decided that what comes out of a radio is not music. Legislation forbade the serving of music with beer, and was aimed at taverns which were employing orchestras to attract customers. This is a good illustration of the fact that beer manufacturers and beer retailers are not very different from other people in business. They are forever trying to increase their sales. The frequently made statement that beer is just sold to satisfy an existing demand is untrue. The sellers of beer, including the Ontario government, are anxious to sell all they can. The highways department, it is true, sends out literature advising the public: "If you drive, don't drink; if you drink, don't drive," but that is probably clandestine. If the government as a whole is aware of this advice, its left hand doesn't take it very seriously (witness, the Hogg's Hollow, Yonge St., beer parlor, catering almost entirely, and of necessity, to motorists).

WILD LIFE AT BACK DOOR

Beavers and deer are actually at large in King township, it has been brought out by discussion at a meeting of the conservation scheme committee. Speakers including the sponsor, Aubrey Davis, of Newmarket, pointed out that King township could become a tourist mecca if developed into a wild life park. There is more fun in seeing a deer or photographing it than in killing it, for the reason that hundreds may see or photograph the same deer, but only one may shoot it.

Beaver's Usefulness

Anyone who has read of the industry, cleverness and usefulness of the beaver, in damming streams and helping to prevent floods in the spring or droughts in the summer, would not dream of trapping a beaver, not even for a new coat for the loveliest woman in the world. Beavers work day-long cutting down trees, dragging them to their dams, fitting them into place. They keep their dams repaired. They do a job which it would cost the government a great deal of money to do, yet we have wantonly slaughtered them and allowed many streams to dry up, which they would have kept flowing.

Attracting Tourists

Property values in King township have been going up in recent years, as the result of the demand for farm homes for country estates. It is pointed out that a successful wild life restoration movement in King, making the township a reserve or park, will attract both tourists and home seekers. The work now started can have only the happiest outcome, both in satisfaction to those engaged in it, and in tangible returns to residents of the township.

RELIGION IN SCHOOL

Religion should be taught in more of the public schools of the province, Toronto conference of the United Church of Canada was told last week. The idea behind religious teaching in the schools is that it is no use teaching children how to perform a job, how to earn a living, if we do not direct their energies in Christian paths. The difficulty is that people cannot agree about the meaning of religion or on what should be taught. Among Protestants there are many different denominations, each with its own beliefs. The points on which they disagree cannot be taught, perhaps are not worth teaching, and surely the points on which they do agree, the fundamental Christian truths, are already being taught in our schools.

Truths Already Taught

Teachers are already concerned with the honesty and character of their students. Moreover, the Christian ideas of sacrifice and love of one's neighbor underlie the English literature which is a principal subject of study. When there is talk about teaching religion in school, it looks like an attempt to drum up interest in the superstitions which are driving people from the churches. If real religion is not already taught in the schools, then it would be better to introduce a straightforward course on "a Christian social and economic order," and let youth do its own thinking.

RUSSIA'S TREASON TRIALS

The frequent treason trials and resultant wholesale executions in Russia must have a meaning. Naturally there is considerable guessing when we try any interpretation over in this hemisphere, but there is definite evidence that the people of Russia are not yet 100 per cent behind their form of government. If we are capitalists, we may see reason for rejoicing; if we are socialists, we may see reason for sorrow. On second thought, however, we will be inclined to say let the democrats rejoice; let the dictators sorrow. Most people are glad to see the tremendous effort being made in Russia today to better the one-time pitiful condition of workers and peasants. Perhaps the harsh dictatorial methods are necessary, but those of us who have been bred and reared in democracy find that difficult to believe. Such an extreme form of socialism as communism is in itself a dictatorial philosophy, and the Russians have found it necessary to modify it greatly. The fact is that force cannot accomplish everything. The sun may induce a man to remove his coat, as the fable tells us, whereas the wind will make him wrap it more tightly about him.

A Day of Reckoning

When Canadians speak of socialism they are inclined to think of an idealistic approach to a Christian state, of people loving their neighbors as much as themselves in fact as well as in theory. When they speak of communism, they think of a philosophy of equality being forced upon people regardless of whether they love their neighbors or not. We would not argue that the Russian revolutionaries could have accomplished quickly any great reforms with peaceful, Christian methods, for Russia's population at the time of the revolution was largely illiterate. The time will come, however, when Russian communism will have to permit freedom of speech and the freedom of the press, and survive it, or be reckoned a failure by the intelligent people of the world. But even if Russian communism should "backslide" into capitalism, history will record the period of communism as one of unbelievable progress in modernization and education, a time of greater progress than the reign of Peter the Great, whom we remember as the monarch who went abroad to learn how to build ships.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN

The death of Sir Robert Borden brings back the conscription issue of 1917 and the peace conference of 1919. It is too soon for the historians to have formed an impartial opinion on the conscription of men for war service, but Canadians have been almost unanimous in approval of Sir Robert's insistence on national status for Canada, and the other dominions, as peace treaty signatories and as members of the League of Nations. Canada, under Sir Robert's leadership, answered the call of 1914 in the name of patriotism, but so heavy was the price paid, and so great the change in thought during the war years, that Canadians could not tolerate being drawn into another war automatically.

Life and Property

Opinion is still divided upon the question of conscription. There does not seem to have been any violent reaction against conscription since the war, partly for the reason that Canadians have believed the last war would be the last of wars. One interesting, and reasonable, opinion has been freely expressed, and can be regarded as a widely accepted idea, to the effect that in the event of another war there should be conscription of wealth as well as of men. If one woman's husband is to be taken, why shouldn't her neighbor's excess money be taken? If one man's life is to be taken, why shouldn't another man's wealth be taken?

SHEEPSKINS

University years are ending and young people are trooping gaily away from the seats of learning with degrees and diplomas. Our first thought is to congratulate them. Our second is to wonder "just what they are taking away with them." Unfortunately, many of them take away from the university little more than their sheepskins and sheepish memories of four years of unused opportunities. The one thing which practically all university students have in common is the means to attend. They are the children of the more fortunate in means. Too often they have been sent by their parents, and have little interest in learning themselves. They study enough to pass their examinations, but they have no burning curiosity, no desire to unravel the mysteries of the universe. They leave the university a little wiser than when they entered, but not so well educated as if they had spent those four years earning their living.

New Entrance Requirements

The entrance requirements should be changed. Boys and girls should not be admitted to universities according to the ability of their parents to pay their way, for, after all, the public, through government grants, private gifts and bequests, is paying a good share of the cost and the public should be assured of the greatest return from its investment. Entrance to university should be based on ability and desire to learn.

Better Students, Better Teachers

Incidentally, a change in the students attending university would bring about a change in the universities. In order to teach in public, separate or high schools, it is necessary to take some training in teaching, but in order to teach in a university no training in teaching is necessary. It is merely necessary to have a number of degrees, indicating probably considerable ability in writing examinations but not necessarily qualifying their holders to teach. The result is that universities are filled with some terrific bores. There are many good teachers, of course, but there are far too many men who are getting little across to their students and are taking year after year to do it.

Interesting To Us

Perhaps this is a matter of little interest to us, the people of Newmarket and the farmers of northern York county. But is it? If we are going to make headway with the improving of this world of ours, we must look to our universities to produce leaders, and we must be sure that our universities are doing a good job. We don't want our pulpits filled with misfits whose principal qualification for the ministry was the money to go to university. We don't want our health in the hands of any except the most able members of the community. We don't want our parliaments filled with second-raters, or our newspapers manned by the illiterate. We want our universities to do a job, and a good job too.

ONE THING AFTER ANOTHER

Premier M. F. Hepburn has us all guessing. Just when the public thinks it has him pinned down to an election on the now nearly forgotten school question, he changes to a new horse, named C.I.O., whose pedigree he declares to be by Communism out of U.S.A. He seems to have the new horse pretty well broken, with the public betting divided along very different lines from the school question days, when he springs a new surprise. Again he declares that he is breaking the same horse, C.I.O., but the public loyalties are again divided along new lines. Conservatives have already been divided into Hepburn Conservatives and Rowe Conservatives; now the Liberals are to be divided into King Liberals and Hepburn Liberals, for Mr. Hepburn declares that Ontario party organizations cannot be both. Existing organizations, for instance, the North York Liberal Association, the Newmarket Liberal Association, the Newmarket Women's Liberal Association, are declared by Mr. Hepburn to be provincial Liberal organizations. Mr. King, he says, must form his own organizations. Yes sir, Mr. Hepburn has us all guessing.

KILLING SPEED

"Speed kills!" was the wording on a commonly seen Ontario highway sign a few years ago. It did kill, it is killing and it will kill. The new highway limit of 50 miles an hour seems to have speeded up the Yonge St. weekend traffic from about 45 miles an hour to 55 miles an hour with the occasional car going 60 miles. There is less traffic congestion, and that is a good thing. That should mean less accidents. When accidents do occur, however, the extra five or ten miles an hour will increase the number of fatalities and should affect seriously the chances of recovery of those injured.

The Common Round

By Isabel Inglis Colville
"District Annual"

Every year, when the district annual or some other interesting event takes place, to which one must travel by car, I say unkind things to myself about my inability to drive a car.

I get no sympathy from my better-half, who simply remarks, semi-annually, — "serves you right, because you won't drive."

Well, maybe it does, but after trying to climb a neighbor's gatepost (unsuccessfully); giving my husband nervous prostration and making a good attempt at committing suicide, the inclination to drive a car, strange as it may seem, subsided.

Then, too, when I thought of learning to drive, my mother looked at me, appraisingly and, without lack of decision, announced, "anyone who likes to risk their life with you, may go, but I will not be that one!"

Such being the circumstances, I sometimes am in doubt as to whether I shall get places or not. But this time all was well, only we had to go at the ungodly hour of 8:15 and put in our time, as best we could, till 10:30.

How is it that when you are not on a regular shopping trip, you always see some unwieldy article which you feel belongs in your life?

I saw a small galvanized iron TUB, without which I felt life was a desert.

So, after turning over the pros and cons and consulting our driver, who said it would be all right "if we didn't all buy tubs," I bought this little one.

It turned out a charming receptacle for the odds and ends gathered within the waiting hours and, just as I was beginning to wonder if I should have to appear at the meeting, balancing it on my head, which might have been rather disastrous as it contained, among other things, a jar of butter milk, a kindly shopkeeper put it in safety for me, and I was able to go off, with an easy mind.

We arrived rather early at the meeting place, which this year was the Anglican parish hall in Aurora. It is so delightful that the churches are always so ready to house these Institute conventions.

The meeting opened as usual with the Institute ode.

Then came the secretary's report—full and clear as always, and the president's address followed. She drew attention to the map of the district, represented at the D.A. and showed how large our district really is.

She asked us to consider, "Why we belong to the Institute, the most wonderful woman's organization in the world." She spoke of the work being done throughout the world by it.

She wondered if the officers of the Institute feel a real sense of responsibility; if we, as members feel it an honor to be asked to hold office.

She said that we did not know how much our lives were influencing others—they might rise or fall, by our example—that our outlook on life was being judged and copied; also that only as women's outlook on life broadened could there be real world progress. We must work with the construction gang—not with the wrecking crew.

She asked that the name of every officer, of every branch, be sent to the district secretary. At the close of Mrs. Boyd's speech the branch reports were called for.

Each year it seems to me these reports are more worthwhile—one learns to listen for them and to sense the advance in the sense of responsibility and educational value represented by these reports.

The things done and papers heard by the various branches were so worth-while, that one could not single out any special branch although we all thought Gormley well deserved the prize of the brief case, although we could all sympathize with the judges when they told us how difficult they found it to pick the best report, among so many that were excellent.

The reports told of work done for children, for the sick, for the needy and the old.

Speaking of the old, one branch visited the County Home and took a Christmas tree with them; I am sure the lights on their own trees would shine the brighter for that kind deed.

It seemed that the hungry were fed, the cold were warmed, the sick were visited, the sorrowing comforted. So much for the bodily needs. Now for the mental development.

Papers and talks were given in the various Institutes by members and by visitors, on almost every imaginable subject.

Health talks were given by physicians and others. Beautify our homes and our persons were the subject of discourses, while music, art, cooking, first-aid, homecraft, legislation, historical research and peace were brought before many Institute branches.

The financial reports showed how the money was obtained—in every case this meant hard work—with which to carry on the work each branch had set itself. Snowball last year sponsored a resolution to the effect that dumping should not be allowed on our highways, and it was brought out that urban dwellers were as great sinners in this respect as rural people.

Mrs. Reddick gave the opinion that the resolution to forbid dumping on highways should come from the district, rather than from a single branch.

Mrs. W. H. S. Cane, whose work among children is so well known, gave a short report on "Health and Child Welfare." She advocates progressive legislation on health and child welfare—the great need must be met by suitable legislation.

About this time, my daylight-saving-trained stomach gave warning that it objected to standard time meals, so we welcomed the call to the dining room.

The tables looked pretty and what was on them most appetizing. After the grace was sung, Mrs. Killingsworth proposed the toast to the King, and your humble chronicler did likewise for the Institute.

Being rather excited at this point I swallowed my tomato juice with a loud and resounding gulp, but with no bad after-effects, for I thoroughly enjoyed the luncheon hour.

When we came together again, the meeting opened with the singing of "The Maple Leaf."

Dr. Boulding gave an address of welcome. He said that in spite of a certain timidity natural to a lone man in the midst of so many women, it was one of the pleasant duties of his office to welcome an organization, such as the Institute, to Aurora.

He spoke of the work of the Institute with which he had become familiar both as a physician and as mayor; specially the readiness of the members to help in any way when help was needed.

Mrs. Reddick responded in a very pleasing manner.

Mrs. Sinclair, one of a committee appointed to investigate the need of the Queen Mary hospital, gave a splendid report. She told of the wonderful work done there for the T.B. patients—the boys and girls were taught various crafts; the education they received and the general preparation given the patients to fit them on their return to health and normal life, for some niche in this busy world.

She advocated a continuance of Institute support for this worthwhile object. After some discussion it was left to each branch to give what they could—as some were better fitted to give than others.

The nominating committee now submitted their list, and the officers for the coming year were selected with a minimum of time and effort.

Mrs. W. R. Steeper gave the report from the Federated board. She spoke of the increase in members—we are gaining all the time. She advised all to study the handbook, especially pages 7-8-20-21.

The junior branches should be encouraged to send in their reports. She spoke of the duties of conveners; stressed the fact that reports should be sent in at the proper time; that there should be more women on school boards; and that books are a wonderful help in adult education. She also stated that what Canada makes Canada, and emphasized the necessity for peace and good will being made much of in schools, and the value of the study of international relationships. And above all, in their efforts to make money, Institutes must not break the law.

Mrs. Lewis, in presenting the judges' decision on the branch reports, said that the educational must be prominent in the programs.

Miss Slieter, from the department, then spoke. She spoke of what constituted Institute needs; the necessity of arranging short courses; how we must meet our obligations.

She stressed the fact that neither at monthly meetings, nor at district annuals is enjoyment our end and aim—we should work and think and help—and go home tired—that brings results.

Just then we had to leave—so plus the tub and a good many ideas, we went home, tired, with a worth-while weariness.

The Mothers' Club Gets Under Way

BY RUTH DINGMAN HESS

"I don't see why Jenny Wren was elected president of the Mothers' Club this year," complained Hattie Nuthatch to her friends, Cora Chickadee and Mrs. Yellow Warbler, as they flew away from the first mothers' meeting of the season.

"I rather think that some of the ladies thought that if she didn't hold any office in our organization she would talk far too much and break up the meetings," explained Cora. "She does chatter rather incessantly, you know. But if she's president and has to chair the meeting she will have to keep quiet part of the time. And she is very capable, too."

"Well, I believe Mrs. Pecker was rather counting on being elected again, but I guess she will have to be content to be convener of the program committee for this year," said the Warbler lady.

"I know she's getting busy on the program already, isn't she? I heard her make you promise to give a talk on Teaching Our Young to Fly Fearlessly, Hattie."

"Oh, dear! I wish I hadn't said I would," mourned Hattie. "I'll be so nervous. Mrs. Rob Robin was so calm and collected when she spoke today—I could never do as well as that."

"What was her subject?" asked Mrs. Warbler. "I was so sorry to be late and miss it."

"She spoke on How To Teach Our Children To Feed Themselves," replied Cora. "And it was so helpful—I have just the same problem with mine as she has—only with different food, of course."

"She told of her one boy that simply will not pick up the worm himself. She picks up a nice, squiggly worm and places it right in front of him, but he won't take it and eat it. He wants her to put it right into his mouth. My Johnny does the very same thing with insect eggs."

"And what is the answer to the problem?" questioned Mrs. Warbler.

"Well, if they don't respond to persistent attempts to get them to eat by themselves, Mrs. Robin says we must simply let them go without for a meal or two and they'll change their minds soon enough," said Hattie.

"If I could only be sure that they would change their minds, I'd try it, but it does seem a cruel way and I do hate to see them losing the nourishment," sighed Cora. "I guess we parents should take this 'bringing up' business pretty seriously, though."

"I do think we made one good decision at the meeting today," said Hattie. "I am so glad we are going to do more for the little bird orphans. It's such worthwhile work. So many of them are killed so unnecessarily simply because they don't know the dangers to watch out for and this course of talks on 'Safety First' that we are going to give them will help a lot, I'm sure."

"It will be nice having Mrs. Brown Thrasher for our soloist this year, won't it?" remarked the warbler. "That Song Sparrow lady that sang at our meetings last year has a sweet voice, but, of course, she sang the same song every meeting. But this year the Thrasher will have a delightful variety. She's a regular Mockingbird, you know."

"It looks like a very interesting summer's work," said Cora enthusiastically. "I just hope our husbands won't go on strike when they realize how seriously we're all taking this. It does mean that they have to stay at home one afternoon a week. Still, it's really such a nice opportunity for the fathers to become real pals with their children."

"I must hurry home, I'm afraid," exclaimed Hattie at this point. "Chubby is inclined to play rather strenuous games with the children and I don't like to be away too long. Goodbye for now!"

Notes . . . To You

A Note of Progress

It's a great world. Press a switch and a room or a city is flooded with light. The world's greatest music is no further away than your radio dial. In a comfortable day's jaunt you can cover a route that would have meant months of hazardous travel a few years ago.

In such a day of miracles perhaps it is not too much to hope that our landlady will find a way of making our bed so that our feet will not stick out. Or are we too optimistic.

Absence—Unnoted

For the past few weeks The Era has struggled on without the helpful presence of this column. The citizenry of Newmarket and district, with fortitude that would have rejoiced the hearts of their pioneering forefathers, have carried on as best they could without the strengthening influence of "Notes To You."

POLICE COURT

OFFERS BERRIES TO FRUIT MAN

Mainspring Of Watch Proves Bone Of Contention On Farm

Walter Millet, Vaughan Rd., Toronto, and obviously of foreign birth, ran into difficulties when he appeared in Newmarket police court on Tuesday to answer charges of peddling.

"I don't peddle, I take orders," he insisted.

Constable A. R. Crouth had seen Millet go to the door of a North Gwillimbury farmhouse, talk to the housekeeper and return to the truck. Investigating, the officer found several items of drygoods in the truck. The accused showed the officer an order book, but it was in a language which the officer could not understand.

"There is no proof of sale," Magistrate L. J. C. Bull stated. Constable Crouth asked for a week in which to get evidence. "Remanded for one week," the magistrate said.

"Who is going to pay my expenses?" Millet asked.

Payment for the main-spring of a watch proved to be a matter of contention in the settlement of Horace Borbiek's suit for non-payment of wages for work done on the farm of Wm. Rhindress. The latter had sold the watch to his employee, charging an amount of $5 against his wages. After the sale, but while the watch was in Rhindress' possession, the main-spring broke and the cost of repairing this was also charged against Borbiek's wages.

Rhindress should pay for the main-spring, the magistrate decided. Complete settlement was made by awarding $8.37 to the complainant, each paying their own costs.

F. Smith and Bryce Chambers each paid $2 and costs for unlawfully carrying firearms. They were shooting groundhogs on the property of Fred L. VanNorman on Sunday, June 6. Both pleaded guilty.

EXAMINER VISITS HERE

Ernest J. Farmer, distinguished Canadian musician, will be in Newmarket on June 21 to conduct midsummer examinations for the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

"A friend invited us to shoot on his grounds," they said. "We did not know that we had left his property and were trespassing on the property of another."

Ernest Phillips and F. Smith also paid $2 and costs for Sunday shooting.

Answering a summons for reckless driving, laid by Constable Shadwick, John Whyndarne of Toronto pleaded that a faulty knee-action gear had caused him to swerve, while rounding a corner.

"I had been driving further north, where the curves were well banked," he explained. "I came to a curve that was sharper than I expected. After the constable stopped me, I took the car to a garage, where a mechanic told me fluid had been leaking from the knee-action gear of the car."

He was fined $10 and costs, and his driving permit was cancelled for 15 days.

John Saulman, peddling foreign strawberries in Newmarket without a license, had the misfortune to call at the home of a local fruit merchant, who notified Chief of Police Hall.

The accused had explained that he came here to sell the berries to the merchants, but that it was Wednesday afternoon and he found the stores closed. He had been advised to sell them from house to house.

"The man who told him to do that was obviously not a fruit merchant," Mr. Hall remarked.

N. L. Mathews, K.C., acting for the town of Newmarket, asked that a stiff fine be imposed, pointing out that the license fee was $100. Five dollars and costs, with the alternative of seven days in jail, would be sufficient, the magistrate decided. "These peddlars are seldom very well off," he said. Sometimes it is a case of going to jail because of inability to pay a fine, he pointed out.

Vern. Simpson, F. T. Malone, E. Hodgins, Bridgen's Ltd., D. Burns, L. Pape, were among those who paid fines on speeding charges.

CAUSE OF ACCIDENTS

beers through the light, to concentrate their advertising on youth, to remember that their advertising is to create taste, not to sell direct, to cultivate the editorial side of newspapers.

"I haven't seen anywhere conditions worse than on Bay St., Toronto," Mr. Dobson said. "Mothers are betraying their children when as social hostesses they are serving liquor."

"In the schools of Great Britain pupils are being taught that, according to science, the danger is not excess use of alcohol but in limited use. Alcohol very quickly passes into the blood stream. In a very short time 80 percent of that alcohol is coursing through their veins. It is having an effect on the nerve centres of the brain."

"The effect of alcohol is to break down the little bridges between the cells. The first effect is the loss of the ability of self-criticism. We think we are behaving well or brilliantly, but our thoughts are not correct."

"We can't judge distances. Messages are not conveyed by the brain so quickly. It is the difference between ten feet and 20 feet."

"Accidents are due to that first effect of limited drinking. Science is pointing that out in the great traffic centres of the world, London, Paris, Tokio, New York."

"When the prophets talked of the evils of drinking they referred to beer and wine only. The excesses which tended to bring down the Roman empire were just in beer and wine. It was just beer and wine which brought the career of Alexander the Great to an early end. Distilled liquors were not generally used until the tenth century of our era."

"Temperance does not mean taking a little bit of everything whether it is poison or not."

"Who does not know of human life that has been destroyed, of lives that have been ruined, through alcohol? You can't stop the accidents on this continent until you clear the brain. The accidents have become so terrible that there is an effort to hide the truth."

"Now the movement to catch youth in Britain—they are out to get three million youths—who have never tasted liquor—is on the increase. Accidents are increasing because of drinking, according to the British Medical Association. The British government is sending literature to 15,000,000 homes. So many of our newspapers have been receiving revenue from liquor interests that we haven't heard about what is going on in Britain."

"But it is leaking out, now that the situation in this province is becoming so serious."

INSTITUTE ASKS

Mayor Dr. C. R. Boulding of Aurora. Mrs. E. Reddick of King replied.

The guest speaker, Miss E. Sliester, from the department of Women's Institutes, Toronto, gave a very interesting and instructive address on "Co-operation Program". She explained the uses of the new handbook and its function.

"The amount of literature published at our office is amazing," she said. "It takes 15 mail bags to hold the circulation of the Home and Country magazine alone."

"Today it is not so much what you want but what you need to improve your work." She recommended three methods of study: Speakers' service, Local Leaders' method and Home Conference method. "The aim of the Institute is to promote education, service and entertainment," she said.

Members of the Mount Albert Junior Institute gave a demonstration of the correct and incorrect ways of wearing various clothes.

A resolution was then read: Resolved that this meeting help beautify the country roads and ask the municipal council to find a suitable dumping ground for the country.

A recommendation was also presented that temperance education be included on programs of all Institute branches.

The report of the nominating committee and election of officers then took place, after which the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

Officers elected were: President, Mrs. Arthur Boyd, Newmarket; first vice-president, Mrs. Ralph Willis, Gormley; second vice-president, Mrs. B. Sinclair, Mount Albert; third vice-president, Mrs. J. Boake, Schomberg; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Marchant, Schomberg; Federated representative, Mrs. W. R. Steeper, Mount Albert; alternate representative, Mrs. Phil. Hamilton, Newmarket.

Standing committees consist of: Education, Mrs. E. Reddick, King; health and child welfare, Mrs. W. H. S. Cane, Newmarket; home economics, Mrs. C. Moynihan, Gormley; agriculture, Mrs. A. R. ## LATE-HOUR PARTIES

(By Pedagogy)

The above title is at the head of a piece in a Toronto newspaper, and it certainly is one of the shames of modern society. We can't expect to maintain physical fitness and mental alertness if we do not have adequate rest and sleep. If the truth were known, our mental hospitals and our ordinary hospitals are filled with victims of the late-hour habit. It seems that this unfortunate business of late hours for growing girls and boys, has become worse and worse.

Could not parents break away from this custom by announcing the hours for the different features of the party they are giving for the friends of their family, and strictly adhering to schedule? If mothers of a community would combine to observe some such understanding, it would mean much toward the health of our future citizens.

SET CONFERENCE DATE

The date for the annual fall conference of Toronto Centre Presbyterial, northern section, of the United Church Women's Missionary Society, has been set for Thursday, Sept. 30. The conference will be held at Sutton West. Further notice will be given later.

Every family can find good use for a second living room. With the popularity of home entertainment, which has grown considerably in recent years, many home owners are turning any possible space into another gathering place for the family.

Basements, attics, large halls or unused guest rooms are being converted to practical use. Funds for modernization of interiors may now be obtained under the generous terms of the Home Improvement Plan.

Much has been said and written about the type of apartment known as a recreation room for basement or attic, but if this seems too frivolous for your family's taste there is no reason why an ordinary living room cannot be created in either of these places. The market is flooded with materials with which rooms of this type may be easily constructed.

One home-owner whose family's inclinations ran to bridge, monopoly and other such games, built a living room in a corner of the basement of his home. It was completely shut off from the furnace and could be reached directly from the outside or from the kitchen stairs.

Fire resistant composition board was used for the walls and ceiling, completely hiding pipes and other cellar equipment. A composition covering was also laid over the basement cement floor and a fireplace was built, with bookcases on either side. The cellar windows, high up in the walls, were finished in an attractive manner. The entire house was air-conditioned.

Furnishings were bought with the family's own funds and were in keeping with the character of the room. A large table held a lamp and magazines, and offered space for a game of solitaire or mother's new dress patterns.

Comfortable chairs with reading lamps and convenient tables with attractive accessories completed the room's furnishings.

Advertising cuts down the cost of merchandising.

Hospitals Too Are Being Run On Co-operative Plan

14,000 Persons Are Served By Co-op Hospital In Oklahoma

By Dr. Michael Shadid Organizer and Director of the Co-operative Hospital at Elk City in Oklahoma

(Taken from the Rural Co-operator)

In the fall of 1929 I called a representative number of men to a meeting, and explained to them the benefits that would accrue if 2,000 families could be gotten together and persuaded to pay $50 each family, with which to build and equip a hospital for themselves, and to pay $25 a year for which they could receive medical, surgical and hospital care free of charge.

These men approved the idea, and we formed a temporary organization committee to incorporate what was then called a "Community Health Association," for a sum of $100,000, which capital stock was divided into 2,000 shares of $50 denomination.

My first thought was to do it without injury to existing vested interests in hospitals. Forthwith, I called on three doctors in my town, who were interested in the hospitals, then existing in Elk City. I laid the plans for a co-operative hospital before them, and invited them to join me in the effort, with the assurance that the proposed co-operative hospital association would purchase their hospitals and build no other. The doctors rejected the idea as being unsound, for they were making more money than they could under any co-operative arrangement.

I therefore proceeded to organize the hospital association single-handed, with no other doctor helping me. I purchased the first ten shares of stock myself and sold the first 300 shares to my own patients as they came into my office to see me. From that meagre beginning we have grown to a family of 2,400 member families representing something like 14,000 men, women and children.

Our success last year has been phenomenal. In order to give you an indication of our continued growth I might say that the number of surgical operations at the community hospital run as follows: 1932, 141; 1933, 286; 1934, 458; 1935, 741; 1936, 1,200 (approximate). Although we built an addition to the hospital two years ago we are now building our second addition in order to accommodate our growing number of patients.

At the community hospital we charge a dues fee of $12 for one person, $18 for two persons, $22 for three persons, and $24 for a family of four or more. These dues entitle the subscriber and his family to free examination, treatment, surgical operations and nursing care. In addition to the dues we charge an additional $1 per day when the member or a member of his family is ill in bed in the hospital and also charge a fee of $8 for anesthetic and operating room in minor surgical cases and $18 in major cases. Medicines to take home are also paid for extra. If we did not charge these extra fees or trimmings as some call them we would have to have a dues fee of $50. We know we cannot command such dues and succeed—we therefore lower the dues and charge these extras when the patient avails himself of these services.—From paper given at Co-operative League congress.

A man who took great pride in his lawn found this year, to his dismay, a heavy crop of dandelions. He did his best to uproot them, trying every known device to get rid of them.

As his efforts were unsuccessful, it occurred to him finally that as the government was helping the farmer and rendering so many services, he should write to the department of agriculture about his dandelions. So he depicted in a letter his woes to great extent, enumerating all the things that he had tried and done, and ended his letter by saying, "What do I do now?"

In due time a reply came, stating, "We suggest you learn to love them."—Christian Science Monitor.

A Scotchman was telling about his trip back to the Old Country after an absence of fifteen years. He found his father and three brothers wearing long beards.

"How come?" he wanted to know.

"Because," explained the old man, "ye took the razor off with ye."

Wife (to her husband in the next room): "My dear, what are you opening that can with?"

Husband: "Why, with a can-opener. What did you think I was doing it with?"

Wife: "Well, I thought from your remark that you were opening it with a prayer."

A young husband and wife moved recently into an attractive new home, taking with them their pet dog, who bears the slightly unusual name of Whoopee.

The newcomers naturally felt all eyes were on them and desired to make as exemplary an impression as possible. That was until the night husband and wife suddenly discovered their dog was out.

"Whoop-ee! Whoop-ee!" the wife shouted at the top of her voice as she ran down the sidewalk in one direction.

"Whoop-ee! Whoop-ee!" the husband bellowed as he tore along the other way.

They didn't realize until the next day why the neighbors appeared rather cool.

Preacher—"I touched them rather deeply this morning, don't you think?"

Deacon—"I don't know, I haven't heard what the collection was."

A Scotsman arrived at King's Cross from Glasgow, and of course, was accosted by the usual diminutive Cockney, whose persistent entreaties of "Carry yer bag, sir," persuaded Sandy to let the youth take charge of his two heavy suitcases.

After walking about three miles they arrived at the boarding house, with the poor little Cockney practically exhausted. Sandy placed one copper coin in his hand and started to walk up the steps.

"Ere, ere, Guv'nor, wot's this?" said the little fellow. "Ay weel, 'tis er-ry kind of you," said Sandy, "I'll say heads!"

The local doctor, strolling along the village street, saw one of the old inhabitants seated on a chair

A man, nearly eighty, walked twenty miles from his home to an adjoining town. When he reached his destination he was greeted with some astonishment
by an acquaintance.
"You walked all the way?" exclaimed the acquaintance. "How did you get along?"
"Oh, first rate," the old man replied. "That is, I did till I came to that sign out there, 'Slow Down to Twenty-five Miles Per Hour.'
That kept me back some."

FLOWERS AT HER FEET

By MARIE BLIZARD

CHAPTER 49

KIM PUT his wife's arm from
him and said with mock severity,
"Kathleen Preston, I thought I
made an honest woman of you when I married you." She had just phoned Adelaide Compton
she would be glad to serve on her hospital entertainment committee.

"So you did, Kimball. Aren't you pleased with the results?
Aren't you glad that I'm developing a kind heart and want to help people?"

"Explain," he said sternly.
"Gladly. Sometimes I think
maybe I don't share enough of my great happiness with other people. I'm the luckiest and happiest girl in the world." She started blithely but as always,
when she thought of her own happiness, it brimmed up in her eyes and heightened the new beauty that had come into her plain face.

"Proceed."

She tried to recapture her gaiety. "Why I thought it would be nice to help Adelaide. Her committee does do very good work. The Avondale hospital
you know is a charity hospital.
It's quite a wonderful institution. The very best surgeons go there to treat the blind at no cost.
There are a great many poor little children there who can't see at all. They can't see their toys. They can't have movies
like other youngsters."

Kim was not taken in. "Kathleen, you're breaking my heart.
Tell me the rest."

"I'm trying to," she said patiently. "Adelaide's committee arranges Sunday night entertainments for these people. The little ones and the poor old people. Don't you want me to do it?"

"And what are you going to do?" he asked flatly.

"Why . . . I . . . I thought
perhaps it would be nice for Alix. I thought she might like to do her little act for them.
Something, you know . . . to . . .
to make her feel she was doing good."

Kim lifted his wife's chin tenderly. "Kathleen, did Mr. Garrity call you anything to do with this?"

"Yes," she said.

"I thought so. Tell me about
it."

"Kim, you'll probably think I'm a meddling old woman but please believe that I'm doing what I think is right. Mr. Garrity came from . . ."

So Kathleen told Kim what her plans were.

"I hope you're doing the right thing," he said when she had finished. "It will be a good thing for Alix to feel that she is doing something for other people. But don't you remember that she said she had to go to Greenwich
on Sunday?"

"That was last Sunday," she said. "I'm going to stop at her shop in the morning and I won't take 'No' for an answer. Keep your fingers crossed for me, Kim."

Kathleen dropped in at the shop where Alix worked the next morning.

"Don't think I'm going to make a practice of interrupting you,"
she said to Alix. "I've really come on business. Alix, I wonder if I could arrange to have that old Queen Anne chair of mine
recovered through this shop?
I'm terribly fond of it but it is rather a wreck."

"It will be like new, Kathleen,
if you want us to do it. Wait a minute, I'll call Mr. Howard and he'll . . ."

"Don't bother. If you'll take care of it, it will be all right."

She made a great show of glancing anxiously at the clock.
"I've got to get out and do some telephoning," she said. "I've gotten myself into a beastly situation. Here it is Wednesday with a committee meeting at noon and I haven't done the job that was assigned to me."

"But you can use our telephone," Alix said.

"Thanks," Kathleen followed.
Alix into the tiny office and sat down. "Alix, perhaps you can give me a suggestion. Adelaide Compton has roped me into promising to help her out by arranging a number for Sunday night. She's on the entertainment committee at the Avondale hospital. Every Sunday night
they get up something for the patients. It's really a very worthy cause but . . ."

She gave every appearance of being bored with the whole thing.

Alix said quickly, "The Avondale hospital? Oh, Kathleen, you must do it! I happen to know something about that. It was . . .
it was one of John Sayre's pet charities. I remember one time
we had to stop there when we were going somewhere else. He had forgotten to mail a check
and he wanted them to have it
before the first of the month."

"Oh, really?" Then Kathleen said to herself: "That explains
it!"

"Why don't you ask Grace Neville to help you out? She does awfully cute readings. Most of the patients are children and they'd love that."

Kathleen appeared to think it over as a bright idea. Then her face fell. "That would be grand but Grace is still in the south."
She had met Grace shopping only a few days before!

"But, Alix," she looked up brightly, "you've given me a grand idea. That is . . . I mean
I don't suppose . . ."

"Don't suppose what?"
Kathleen shook her head. "No, I'm not going to do that. It's enough that Adelaide got all my hard-working friends, too."

Alix laughed. "What are you talking about?"

"Well, the grand idea you gave me was that you might help out.
But it would be an imposition to ask you to spend your Sunday evening at a hospital. I won't ask you to."

Alix was surprised. "I'd love to help you, Kathleen, but what could I do?"

There was exactly the right
degree of pleased gratitude in Kathleen's voice. "Would you, Alix? Why, my dear, you would be simply wonderful. And do you have an act? I should say you have. How about doing
those Mother Goose songs?"

"The ones I did Christmas night?"

"Of course! I'll have Roberts—
Roberts was Kathleen's maid—
"take in the costume to fit you.
You look darling anyway in that high peaked hat and the white dress. The children will adore
it."

Alix was beginning to get stage fright. "Are you quite sure that I'm good enough?"

Kathleen picked up her gloves
and bag. "You're the best ever.
Children are never hard to entertain. There'll be a few old people. It's not like a Broadway performance, you know. I've got to hurry along now. You've saved my reputation, you lamb.
Come over tonight if you have
time and we'll get that costume ready and go over the songs. I'll loan you my guitar."

Sunday night, at seven, Kathleen held a wrap for Alix to slip over her costume and hoped that Alix didn't see the nervous way
her hands twitched. She kept up a running fire of chatter in the motor that took them to the Avondale hospital.

"Don't be nervous, Alix, darling," she said when she sent Alix
on her way untroubled into the children's ward.

Alix was nervous, but when she saw the sea of little sightless faces, the countless pairs of big dark glasses, the patients in wheelchairs being wheeled to the back of the ward, she lost her nervousness.

"Oh, let me do it well and make them happy if only for a little time," she prayed, and smiled at all of them. Her own eyes were filled with sympathetic tears because she had to face those little ones who could not see her.

She struck a chord on the guitar and went into her songs.
She sang them through once.
And then again. And still they wanted more.

"I'll sing some more for you,"
she said willingly. "Is there anything special you'd like to hear?"

Through the clamor she heard
the voice of an old man at the back of the ward. "Will ye sing Love's Old Sweet Song?"

"I will," she called and struck
another chord.

"In the gloaming, oh, my darling. . . ." She started to sing and looked up to see the man who had asked for it but her eyes
went to another side of the room
—to a man who half rose from a wheel chair, whose eyes were covered with great black glasses.

" . . . oh, my darling! John!"
His name broke from her in a cry and then she sang again until she had finished her song. At last she could see the "flowers at her feet."

CHAPTER 50

Alix sang her song all the way through for John Sayre and the other hospital patients. Sitting there on a high stool in a Mother Goose costume, she sang it softly, with husky sweetness for all the room to hear. The song that came straight from her heart and poured all that was in it out to that lonely figure sitting forward
tensely in a wheel chair.

Are you blind, my darling?
Why are you here, a stranger
amid strangers, when there are so many who love you? What miracle brought me here to you?

The song was ended. Alix climbed down from the chair,
unheeding the hands that reached to help her, not hearing the applause for her.

She walked down through the aisle of beds.

"John!" That was all she said.
"Alix!" He reached out both his hands with the uncertain
gesture of the newly blind.

"Oh, darling," she murmured.
"I didn't know where you were.
I tried to find you."

"You won't leave me now?"
"No, not if you need me."
"I've always needed you," he said.

"We have to take our patient back now." The nurse put her hands on the handle of the chair.

"Can't . . . ?"
"Nurse, can't she . . ."
"Not tonight," the nurse said firmly. "Tomorrow between 11
and 12."

How long she stood there watching that lonely figure wheeled from the ward, how many times she said, "Yes, I'll come again." Thank you, "I'm glad you liked it"—Alix didn't know.

Kathleen stood at her elbow.
Kathleen, practical as usual.
"Alix, these people have to be tucked in for the night. Come along, dear."

"Kathleen, it was John!"

"I know," Kathleen said gently and kicked Kim on the ankle.
"But how? Why? Alix wasn't really with them. There was a divine wonder in her eyes."

"That just goes to show that
'bread on the waters'."

"Yes. Tomorrow I can see him."

Kathleen said, "Alix, there's something you've got to know and be brave about."

"I can be brave about anything now," Alix answered.

"I saw Dr. Reilly at the hospital. He tells me that John is . . .
he was badly injured. Dr.
Neville is going to operate on Tuesday. They aren't sure . . ."

Alix closed her eyes. "He will see." She willed it.

The nurse left them alone.
Left Alix with her hands tightly clashed in John Sayre's. Left them to bridge the two years between.

"John, dearest," she nestled
her soft hair against his cheek,
"why didn't you tell me that you loved me then?"

"I wanted to be sure, Alix.
You were so young. I tried to ask you if you cared for me."

"And I was afraid to let you know that I cared. I was too proud to tell you that you were wrong when you thought that I loved Bill. But I've paid for it.
It broke my heart."

"I'll mend it, darling," he promised.

"Why did you hide away, John?"

"For business reasons, Alix.
Perhaps I will see again."

"You will, darling. You've got to."

"If it is to be that I shall not well, there would be time enough then to let the news get around. Alix, if . . . if this operation is not a success . . ."

"It will be but if—if not, you can't ever lose me again, John.
I've been too unhappy. You can't leave me again."

"A blind husband for anything
as young and lovely as you would not be right."

"Right or wrong, John Sayre, I'll sue you for a million dollars for breach of promise. I'll haunt
you. You'll find me on your doorstep every night of your life."

He held her close and they didn't speak for a little while.

"John, marry me tomorrow
here in the hospital before the operation."

"No, Alix. Not until I can see my bride."

"Oh, I'm much more attractive
than I used to be," she said
hastily.

"You couldn't be," he said.
"Alix, we may not be married for a long time. If this operation is not a success, I'm not going to give up hope. There is still Steif-ritz in Vienna."

"John, I don't want to seem like a forward girl but how do you expect me to wait? Please,
please marry me tomorrow
morning!"

His mouth set in an adamant line.

"No, Alix, not until I know."
"John, let me ask you something," she twined her fingers in his, kissed him on each of his closed eyes, "Kathleen says . . ."

The murmur of her voice was low and died on her last word
while her eyes fastened on his mouth waiting for his answer.

"In a week, darling," he said at last.

"In a week we'll know and if . . ."

She stopped his next words
with her lips pressed to his.

Alix's heels beat a tattoo on the cement floor of the hospital corridor. She spoke excitedly:
"Kathleen, Dr. Neville said
he'd know surely today!"

"Huck up, Alix, Dr. Neville has assured you that he found the condition much more hopeful
than he thought."

"Then why can't I see him?"
she demanded.

"Because he has to be kept absolutely quiet until Monday. Besides, it's bad luck for the bride and groom to see each other before the wedding." Kathleen pressed Alix's hat on her head.

"Come on, we've plans to discuss
if you two are going to be married soon."

The late afternoon sun came out from behind a cloud. Its golden glints poured through the long windows of an apartment high above Park Ave. It lighted, as if with celestial blessing the dark glasses of the man standing proudly beside a girl. It struck the metal of a tiny circlet held in the wrinkled hand of a white-frocked minister. But it could add nothing to the eyes of the girl that shone with stars of pride.

There was music. There was a choir of angels. And there was John Sayre taking off his glasses
to look into the face of his bride.

"I know now why they say 'the bride was radiant,'" he said and took her into his arms. "I shall need my black glasses always
when I look at you."

"Do you see the flowers at our feet? Do you know the soft incense that hangs upon the boughs? That's Keats, John."

Then he turned to Kathleen.
"It's a miracle!" she said.

"I know it is. Love always is,
but you've a lifetime to wonder
at it and your boat sails at six.
Your luggage has already gone
and the car's at the door."

Kathleen slipped her hand into Kim's as they drove back silently
from the pier an hour later.

"Mrs. Preston, how much did that 'miracle' cost me?" Kim asked.

"You owe me $45," his wife answered. "It took only four days for Mr. Garrity to locate John. However, the detective agency charged me for a whole week's salary."

(THE END)

6th Con., N. G.

The lovely weather, without an occasional shower, has rejoiced the hearts of the farmers in this neighborhood. The seeding of spring grain has been completed in many places after considerable extra labor, as much of the land, after the continued rain, required plowing.

The farmers are all busy now preparing for roots and field corn. The growth is very remarkable. Some claim seeds and even grain has shown growth in three days.

The service at Bethel last Sunday morning was well attended. The minister gave a very earnest discourse which was much appreciated.

VIVIAN CHURCH AIDED BY ORCHESTRA

The Sunday-school and church service was well attended last Sunday.

Mr. McCormick visited his daughter on Sunday.

Cyrus Gates preached at Hartman on Sunday night. The church was filled and everyone was impressed with the sincerity of the message, particularly so when it came from the heart of a man who goes to his daily toil through the week, and sacrifices all his spare time gladly in the Lord's work.

Vivian young people, under the direction of Mr. Rowan's brother, are organizing an orchestra, and hope soon to be able to assist Mr. Rowan in his wonderful work by their music.

The lovely spring weather has had its healing effect on the people, and the sick who survived the cold winter are able to be around again.

"A Trip To Bristol"

The following is the text of an address given by Mrs. A. C. Marriott to a recent meeting of the Belhaven Women's Institute.

Having given four talks on my trip and stay in England, I want to take you to Bristol, one of the most historic cities in England.

One lady who went to England last summer, asked if she went to Bristol, said no—when traveling to England among the travelers was one of Mae West's detectives and she heard all she wanted to know of Bristol. But I know she missed a lot in not going.

Not only is Bristol, with its famous western suburb of Clifton, most delightful and interesting in itself, but it is the most admirable and historic spot in the west of England, the Bristol channel, and the Wye valley. Bristol's association with the great religious revival of the 18th century is noteworthy. It was here that John Wesley commenced his open-air preaching. He also established a chapel in Broadmead, a suburb, which still appeals to Wesleyans as the oldest Methodist place of worship in the world. I had the pleasure of visiting this little chapel.

From the sea walls is seen a wonderful variety of wood and dale, river and rock, mansion and hill which is far too beautiful to describe. The Bristol channel and the Welsh hills lend themselves to the magnificent panorama.

On the edge of the downs, near the sea walls, rises the ivy-clad tower of "Cook's Folly". The legend runs that a former owner, named Cook, was told by a gypsy that he would have a son who would not survive his 21st birthday.

To guard against this he built this tower and when his son's 21st birthday approached, had him put here. On the eve of the birthday he was congratulating himself that the prophecy could not be fulfilled.

A bundle of wood to light a fire was sent up to the tower as usual to the young man. Unknown to anyone, there was a viper in the bundle, and in the morning the young man was found dead.

Another place of interest is the Zoological Gardens, with the finest collection out of London of birds, beasts and reptiles. The gardens are very artistically laid out, and through the grounds there is a beautiful lake with all kinds of fish.

One thing that interested me was the monkey temple. It represents a ruined temple in the Indian jungle and is provided with artificial sunlight and electric heating in winter. It houses about 100 monkeys.

Bristol is lovely at night with the lovely floodlighted hotels and large buildings. Many beautiful homes are also floodlighted.

The Church of St. Paul is very beautiful with its peculiar tower, which can be seen from many parts of the city. American visitors are interested in the tablet to Oliver, the last English governor of Massachusetts.

George Muller, a Prussian by birth, came to Bristol as a minister in 1832 and took joint charge of Gideon Congregational Chapel. He had previously resolved that he would never, in spite of his poverty, accept money from pew-rents, which was and is always done in our English churches, neither would he ask for money from anyone.

This principle he adhered to and today he has three very large shelters. One is for infants and there is one each for boys and girls. It takes an hour to inspect one of these homes.

Mr. Muller said that for 58 years and nine months this institution has been carried on and they have never appealed to man but simply prayed to God.

I would like to tell you something of Temple Mead station. It is very much like our Union station in Toronto.

From Bristol, within easy motoring distance, you can reach many very lovely summer resorts, such as Weston-Super-Mare, Clevedon, Porton Head, Aust.

Aust is a very delightful place where a ferry runs to and from Wales. It is a country place by the sea, but the tide makes it almost impossible for bathers, but there are always hundreds of visitors, because of its healthy climate and very lovely scenery.

There are no stores there, but you will always find a man on a bicycle on which is a built-up box and on it is printed "Stop Me". From these you can buy all kinds of ices which are nice, but they cannot be compared with our Canadian ice creams.

A very funny experience was a trip from Bristol to Barry Island, in Wales. We took a train en route by boat, a four-hour run up the Bristol channel which, in good weather is so beautiful. I made this trip three times and each time it rained or was misty.

This morning the sea was very rough—so rough you had to hold on to a railing to hold your feet at all. Everyone was desperately sea-sick, which is nothing unusual up the channel. But when we got to our first calling station, Penzance, we could not dock.

We thought perhaps a cup of tea would help us, so while we could we went to the dining-room, not realizing we could not even stop at Cardiff, Wales, and that we had passed it; when finally we stopped and took on passengers and left again.

I spotted a man close by with the dearest little girl and spoke to her and asked if she was going to Barry Island. The father said that we had just left Barry Island.

We were longing to get on land but had to go on and the sea if possible got rougher every minute. We consulted the captain and he said we would have to get off at Mine Head. This was a place I always wanted to visit in Somerset, but thought it was impossible.

When we got there it was still raining, but cleared, and in spite of being sick and weak we had a lovely lunch at a hotel. We then took a sight-seeing trip which was lovely and well repaid us for the terrible trip.

About 6 o'clock we had to retrace our steps to the boat. By this time the sea was much calmer and we really enjoyed this two hours at sea. Those who travel said they had never witnessed anything like that trip.

The facts of Ford V-8 economy are confirmed by owners' findings. Clyde Young, Emo, Ont., reports: "My Ford V-8 was driven 3000 miles through most trying conditions—snow-drifts three feet high in Northern Ontario. Gasoline consumption—most of which was at high speed—averaged twenty-two miles to the gallon!" J. L. Sayers, Edmonton, Alberta, writes: "Getting an average of twenty-five miles to the gallon of gasoline." R. G. Rottluff, Metisqui, P. C., says: "On one long trip to Seattle and back, I averaged 27.2

miles per gallon. Better than I'd expected!" Owner after owner reports 22 to 27 miles on one gallon of gas. You can't beat a car that combines V-8 performance with economy like this!

Two young Scotsmen were at loggerheads over the sharing out of the estate which had been left jointly to them in their father's will. As a last resort they agreed to accept the decision of an old friend of the family. "Boys," said this wise man, "Donald will divide up the estate exactly as he thinks fit." At this Donald's face beamed, but that of Hamish grew visibly longer. "And then," continued the arbitrator, "Hamish will take whatever half he prefers." Era printing prices are low.
